Nowadays, network bandwidths are getting broader and larger amounts of dataset, signals, audio, images, and information are being exchanged; thus, multimedia contents will need to be more accessible in the future than they are now. This special section therefore aims at bringing together researchers, scientists, engineers, professionals, and academics working on automatic multimedia content indexing systems that include the state-of-the-art techniques based on acoustic segmentation, automatic speech recognition, topic segmentation, and video indexing features, in order to consolidate the existing and propose new methodologies. We encourage contributions presenting fundamental theories, novel algorithms, applications, software tools, and case studies especially those (but not restricted to) regarding innovative contributions. Extended versions of selected papers will be considered for publication in the International Journal of Computational Intelligence Studies (IJCIStudies), ISSN: 1755-4985 (Online), 1755-4977 (Print), published by Inderscience Publishers.

Instructions for Authors

The symposium proceedings will be published by Springer-Verlag in their Studies in Computational Intelligence series. Submitted papers should be prepared in Springer style and should not exceed 10 pages. When formatting papers, please refer to the Springer-Verlag web site, and strictly follow the Instructions to Authors. (Note this page is headed 'Instructions for LNCS authors', but it is also applicable to authors in the Computational Intelligence series).

All papers for IIMSS2008 must be submitted in electronic form using the PROSE software review system. The link to the PROSE Paper Submission and Login page is placed here. Please click on "submit a paper" and select "IS06: Automatic Indexing of Multimedia Content". When you submit your paper to the PROSE, it is strongly recommended that the electronic copy of the paper is also sent via e-mail to both the Co-Chairs. All papers must be presented by one of the authors who must register for the conference and pay the fee.
